

INTERCULTURAL CITIES: GOVERNANCE AND POLICIES FOR DIVERSE COMMUNITIES

www.coe.int/interculturalcities

A vibrant, crowded street market scene. In the foreground, a woman in a pink vest and a man in a black jacket are walking towards the camera. To the left, there are stalls displaying various items, including clothing and colorful fabrics. To the right, more people are walking, and some stalls with white cloths are visible. The background shows multi-story buildings lining the street, creating a sense of a busy urban environment. The overall atmosphere is one of diversity and community.

Managing diversity as an opportunity

EU-wide research evidence shows that diversity can

- contribute to prosperity, creativity and growth
- improve decision-making in teams
- productivity and wages are higher in regions and cities with a more diverse population

And also that

- diaspora entrepreneurship fosters development both in host countries and in countries of origin
- Immigration increases foreign trade

The cities as laboratories

The diversity advantage for cities

- Complementary skills
- Access to markets and capital
- Aspiration & entrepreneurship
- Mixing = creativity & innovation
- Cosmopolitan brand

Review the essential functions of the city through an INTERCULTURAL LENS

Diversity alone is not a guarantee of interaction

There need to be:

- Reasons to interact
- Incentives to interact
- Places, institutions agents and tools of interaction

INTERCULTURAL LEADERS & INNOVATORS

Build bridges

At great personal risk!

- A clear framework of rights and responsibilities, outlaw discrimination
- Incentives for cross-cultural initiatives and entrepreneurship
- Invest in community development
- Develop a public debate and discourse about the reality of diversity

- Resource the places where cultures meet – and hybridise
- Resource bridge-builders not gate-keepers
- Foster representative bureaucracy and elected bodies & cultural competence
- Manage cultural conflict
